EPA'S "MOST SERIOUS ENVIRONMENTAL PROBLEMS" LIST

B&T Environmental Law Blog - For years, the EPA has published a list of environmental issues it is focusing on for enforcement. In December 2022, the EPA announced that the list had been renamed "National Enforcement and Compliance Initiatives" (NECI), explaining that "while criminal ... and civil enforcement ... remain the key tools to address serious noncompliance, hold polluters accountable and create general deterrence, the EPA also uses informal enforcement and compliance tools to advance the national initiatives..." For the EPA and its delegated states, the NECIs guide "allocation of enforcement and compliance resources based on the need to address serious and widespread environmental issues particularly in overburdened and vulnerable communities." The EPA has issued NECIs for 2020-23 and has proposed the next round of NECIs for 2024-27. Click here to reach the full article and review the current and proposed list.
